At the end of secondary school I had no idea which direction I wanted to go with my life. I talked with many different people, but when I talked to my aunt (who is also a teacher). She kind of convinced me of becoming a teacher myself. The way she talked about communicating with the children and helping really got in to me. I really love working with children. I'm also a scouts leader, so I already had some experience on going on with them. Now I'm in my second year and I really like it. When I'm teaching in front of the children I really feel this is the thing I want to do for the rest of my life. There is only one more choice I have to make after graduating from high school: Will I do one more year (studying to become a teacher in special schools) or am I going to have my own class?
