

In primary school I enjoyed it when I had a presentation and therewith, the possibility to learn my classmates new information about the subject my presentation was about. You could say that this was the moment when I figured out that I wanted to be a teacher some day.

At First I wanted to teach in primary education but during secondary school I figured out that biology teacher in secondary education would fit me much better.

My own biology teacher was the biggest inspiration. Beside that, biology has always been a thing that I was really passionate about. When I started my bachelor: Biology teacher in the second degree, I was sure about the biology part. And during my First intership I felt the same about the teaching part.
